Is EB-5 Immigration Right For You?

Since 2002, over 125 immigrant investors, from more than 25 countries, have qualified for United States permanent residency by participating in a California Consortium EB-5 qualifying project.

Investor Profile No. 1: Retiree from Canada

For years this investor and his wife escaped Canada's freezing winter months by heading to more temperate climates in Florida. Eventually, they decided to make the United States their permanent home.

A successful businessman, the investment funds came from the couple's savings. Today, this investor has received his I-829 Removal of Conditions and California Consortium continues to manage his 80 acre almond orchard in California.

Investor Profile No. 2: Businessman from Iran

The father of two, this investor and his wife decided to relocate to the United States so that their children would have access to the U.S. educational system, and the opportunities that accompany a degree from a U.S. university.

The investor liquidated shares of his business and invested in the California Consortium vineyard project. Today, the family has a home in Southern California and each family member has received a United States visa.

Investor Profile No. 3: USC Graduate Student from China

Having graduated from USC's business school, this Chinese investor decided to pursue a finance career in the United States and make California her home.

To ensure she was not at risk of overstaying her F1 student visa, her parents gifted the investment capital, which she then invested in a California Consortium manufacturing investment. Upon approval of her I-526 petition, she successfully adjusted her immigration status from a temporary U.S. resident, to a permanent U.S. resident.

Investor Profile No. 4: Physician from Mexico

After building a successful network of medical clinics located throughout Southern California, this investor wanted a permanent residency solution for both he and his family.

Immigrant investors have invested over $60 million into EB-5 qualifying projects sponsored by the California Consortium, a USCIS Designated Regional Center since 2002.

The proceeds from his business, combined with funds loaned by his business partner, provided the capital necessary to participate in the California Consortium almond orchard project. Today the investor and his family have received I-829 Removal of Conditions approvals. Additionally, the investor has been presented with an offer to purchase his business that would allow him to exit with 100% of his initial investment.
